

Get to Know Your Community Levies

By William Tarter, Jr., Policy/Research Associate & Community Advocacy

Each year, citizens make their voices heard on a variety of issues through the voting process. Some of those issues are addressed by means of tax levies. In this issue of Common Ground, we will examine what county issues appear on the ballot in Cuyahoga, as well as how much the levies cost and how the money is allocated. It is our intent that this can serve as a resource for voters, organizations in their educational efforts, and officials in their strategic planning.

Thus far, this year, Cuyahoga County is not scheduled to have any major spending levies on the ballot. It is important to note that just because a levy is expiring in a given year, does not necessarily mean that is when the levy will be on the ballot. Ballot issues may be placed on the ballot prior to expiration.

However, 2018 stands in stark contrast to this year, as the levy for three community organizations (one city and two county) expire or are up for renewal. The first is the Cleveland Public Library levy. The 5.8 mill levy, last passed in 2013, raises over $26 million annually.<sup>1</sup> It represents 47 percent of the library budget.<sup>2</sup> According to the library, all of its operating and capital expenses are supported in part by levy funding, which includes salaries of over 700 employees, system wide programming, and capital expenses for the main campus and 27 branches. For more information: www.cpl.org/thelibrary/aboutthelibrary/

The two county issues are the Cuyahoga County Port Authority and the Cuyahoga County Health and Human Services (HHS) levy. The Port Authority levy is among the smallest county tax levies (.13 mills) and costs the average homeowner approximately $3.45 for every $100,000 of home value. The levy brings in approximately $3 million annually,<sup>3</sup> which amounts to 27 percent of the total budget for the organization.<sup>4</sup> The Port of Cleveland uses most levy funds for current and future maritime and environmental infrastructure projects, such as Cleveland Lakefront Nature Preserve, Irish Town Bend Stabilization efforts, and Flotsom and Jetsom workboat operations. Less than a third of levy funds are spent on Port of Cleveland general operations (which vary from year to year). For more information: www.portofcleveland.com.

The five-year 3.9 mill HHS levy was last passed in 2013 and is set to expire in 2018. It is one of two levies (the 4.8 mill levy was passed in 2016) which fund health and human services; when combined, they bring in $230 million annually. For more information on the Cuyahoga County HHS levies, please read the April, 2017, edition of County Budgeting Matters.

The Cuyahoga County Public Library has a 2.5 mill continuing levy that is administered through property taxes in 47 communities that are served by the library system. The levy was passed in 2008 and brings in $41.9 million per year. The levy costs a homeowner $76.56 per $100,000 in home valuation.<sup>5</sup> The levy makes up over half of the library's operating budget.<sup>6</sup> The levy remains in perpetuity and is not subject to a vote. For more information, check out the Cuyahoga County Library Annual Financial Report.

Cuyahoga Community College (Tri-C) has two alternating 10-year levies, each renewal spaced five years apart. In 2020, a 1.9 mill levy for Tri-C will expire. The levy brings in $50.7 million a year and costs a homeowner $58.19 in annual property taxes for every $100,000 of home value. When combined with the other Tri-C levy, the levies bring in 32 percent of the $332 million annual budget.<sup>7</sup> For more information: www.tri-c.edu/about/college-financial-information.html.

Passed in 2013, the Cleveland Metroparks passed a 2.7 mill, 10- year levy which expires in 2023. The levy brings in $74,225,000 annually and costs the average homeowner $96.25 for every $100,000 in home value. The Metroparks levy comprises 60 percent of the revenue of the Cleveland Metroparks budget. The Metroparks is comprised of 18 reservations spanning more than 23,000 acres with more than 300 miles of trails, eight golf courses, eight lakefront parks, and the Cleveland Metroparks Zoo.<sup>8</sup> Cleveland Metroparks supports nearly 18 million recreational visits to the Park District each year. An economic driver, Cleveland Metroparks contributes at least $855 million annually in economic benefits to the community. The Cuyahoga Arts and Culture (CAC) levy funds one of the largest public funders for arts and culture in the nation. The levy was last passed in 2016, with over 75 percent approval, the highest approval rate of any county ballot issue in the past 10 years.<sup>9</sup> The CAC levy, which charges $.30 per pack on cigarettes, brought in $14,767,137 in 2016 and expires in 2027. The tax is 100 percent of the overall organization budget. Since 2007, CAC has invested more than $158 million in more than 300 organizations. For more information: cacgrants.org.

Nearly 60 percent of the Cuyahoga County Board of Disabilities' budget comes from a 3.9 mill continuing levy that was passed in 2005.<sup>10</sup> At that time, the levy brought in $112 million per year. Today, the levy brings in approximately $105 million per year.<sup>11</sup> The levy remains in perpetuity and is not subject to a vote. For more information check out the 2015 Annual Report.

As Cuyahoga County moves forward, it will be important that voters learn about the impact of levies on organizations, as well as the impact on the overall community.

Nominations Open for Annual Awards

Deadline: June 30

Nominations are open for two prestigious community awards:

Anisfield-Wolf Memorial Award: A $25,000 prize to a nonprofit organization for outstanding service.

Most Treasured Volunteer Awards: Honoring people who help people in Northeast Ohio.

Information and forms may be found at www.CommunitySolutions.com. Nominations may be submitted via USPS, email, or online. All submissions are due by noon on Friday, June 30.

Awards will be presented during the annual Celebration of Human Services on October 20 at the Hilton Garden Inn-Downtown.

"Last year's event at The Q was great," comments Celebration Committee Chair Carter Strang. "This year's event is going to be a whole new ballgame. We're expanding it to be both a celebration and an outstanding educational event for our community."

"Our Celebration luncheon in 2017 will follow a morning of information-packed sessions on timely health and social service topics," explains John Corlett, president and executive director. "We're planning four concurrent sessions addressing CCS strategic priority issues, as well as an outstanding opening speaker."

"For those who have been in Northeast Ohio for awhile, the schedule may sound familiar; it's similar to our signature Human Services Institute of the past—in a half-day format. We look forward to seeing old friends and new ones this year."

Registration for the 2017 Celebration of Human Services will open in September.
